Key features · Supports multiple storage devices · Easily recovers files from USB flash drive regardless of whether you accidentally removed them from the device or not. · Reconstruct files with complete metadata: Exact size, owner, time and date. · Allows you to preview the recovered files prior to saving them on your hard drive. · Restores full system backup without any flaws. · Allows you to fix damaged partitions of your USB drive. · Improves disk performance due to faster scanning. · Totally free of charge. · Supports Windows 8 and all Windows 7 & Windows Vista OS. Pretty much all the functions are working now. I'm able to download and upload files. Photos are being saved into a specified folder. But, when I try to browse through the directories, it won't go through. If I right-click a photo in Windows Explorer, the Select File dialog box opens up with all the files from the USB drive shown. However, I'm only able to pick from the specific directory where I started the program. But, it has saved lots of photos, documents, music, or whatever with other devices. I'm having trouble with one issue. This one seems so strange. When I have a whole list of files and directory from my USB drive, the photos are saved into the designated folder, but if I have only one file, I'm able to save it. But, again, I'm only able to select from a specific directory. Does anybody know what I'm referring to? Is it something with the settings of the application? Please help. Also, I've been learning how to use Windows Explorer. The directory is where the drive is inserted into the USB slot, I believe. If you have another question about Windows Explorer, please ask. These issues (after fixing all of the rest of the files) have only been with the recent set of pictures. I was able to recover nearly all of the previous photos (that I had saved from before this happened) and I haven't had any problems with them since. It's only the new pictures that are causing the problems. Just for my own personal knowledge, what kind of Important advice when looking for computer online tutoring services: Look for a reputable company with a customer service center that you can contact for assistance if you run into a problem with your online tutoring job. If a website is in English, it might mean the company is operated out of the U.S. or other English-speaking countries. If the company offers to send you the files so you can assess the quality of the product, verify all of your files will be intact before hiring it out to someone else. Also, make sure that the files are relatively cheap and not extremely expensive as they won't be worth the asking price if they don't work properly. Reviews are always a good way to determine how good a website is before hiring them out. As the saying goes, "You get what you pay for." Canadians looking for a company that offers free online tutoring services should look at teacheasy and tutorial websites. Not only do these companies offer such services, but they also have a way for you to get online tutoring for free. Lets you learn from experienced professionals who have already gone through the process of learning a skill or topic. Instead of paying an expensive fee to get online tutoring, it's better to get it for free at the same time. One interesting aspect about sites like these is that you can practice your study skills and learn new things at the same time. No matter what kind of online tutoring you need, search sites like these online tutoring website reviews will be able to find it.Q: HTML5 video tag jplayer module loading I'm building a HTML5 app that uses the Jplayer module for video. Because the video files are too big, I'm using the suggested method to load and play video files when the module is installed and added to the page. I have the video files in the correct directory, and the url set to a valid location to the video file, but when I load the video it seems like the jplayer module doesn't find the video file. I looked on the jplayer forums and apparently the files aren't loaded until the jplayer module loads, but it seems like the jplayer module isn't loaded. Is there something wrong here? Also, I'm not terribly comfortable using the javascript file from the jplayer forum, is there a better (cleaner) way to include this javascript?
